“Go out and play.”

It's good for your health.

We heard it over and over as kids. We say it to our own kids. And it's been the motto and message of Westchester County Parks as we use local media, direct marketing and social media platforms to encourage people to come out and visit the parks. Whether they're skilled athletes pursuing a specific, structured activity or just want to spend some time in the fresh air, residents are getting the message that their 50 Westchester County Parks provide the space they need to go out and play, regardless of time of year, place of residence, age, interests or economic status.

Recent articles show that our friends at the National Recreation and Park Association are just as passionate about the importance of physical activity. Their studies reveal that “96% of Americans agree that children should be given more opportunities to be physically active,” and that “83% of Americans believe that park and recreation centers can provide opportunities for physical activity.”

At PRC we're not only promoting good physical health: our parks also provide settings where residents can come and just “be” – heal, relax, read a book or just clear their minds. Our robust programming schedule provides countless opportunities to nurture their social selves, with concerts, performances and shows for a great time out with friends and family.

Here in Westchester, according to our most recent residents' recreation survey, most residents use Parks and 85% rate them good/excellent.

Clearly, providing our 18,000 acres of green space is an important part of the prescription for a healthy lifestyle for children and people of all ages. It's at the core of our department's mission:

Create life-enriching experiences at safe, clean, affordable parks and preserve our natural resources through responsible leadership.

Residents can count on PRC to be accountable, professional and provide excellence as evidenced by being Nationally Accredited for close to a decade and a half. PRC constantly demonstrates its strong commitment to consistently delivering a high level of service.

Nationally Accredited – Only agency in New York State to achieve accreditation by the National Park and Recreation Association (NRPA).

“We know that an average of 22 minutes a day of physical activity - such as brisk walking in a park - can significantly reduce the risk of heart disease and diabetes.”

Just what the doctor ordered...

Residents don't need expensive memberships or lots of equipment to use our giant outdoor fitness center. They fill the tires, lace up their boots or running shoes, choose a park where they can get fit at their own pace and schedule and they're off.

Slow down and breathe...

We recognize that many Westchester residents maintain very busy schedules. We strive to give them their time and space to slow down and discover the many treasures in the parks.

Our thousands of acres of unspoiled habitat are a testament to Westchester County Parks' commitment to excellence in management of our precious natural resources, and residents show their appreciation by becoming volunteer stewards, citizen scientists and enthusiastic participants.

"The more high-tech our lives become, the more nature we need. It's an equation. It's true of families, it's true for children, it's true for adults."

Learn and have fun.

Our summer camp programs epitomize the “go out and play” mindset. Our experts teach young people how to hit a ball, milk a cow, play a musical instrument, respect wildlife and much more, helping them to learn new skills and discover new interests that can stay with them for a lifetime.

Camp Morty enables inner-city children who receive support from the Department of Social Services to experience camping and camaraderie at the Sal J. Prezioso Mountain Lakes Park in North Salem.

The 2017 proposed capital budget for Parks of $110 million will help upgrade recreation facilities across the county. Kensico Dam Plaza, Glen Island Park, Blue Mountain Reservation, the County Center and the North and South County Trailways are just some facilities that will benefit by this capital program.
